

Bones Bailey

Musician/Songwriter

Biography

Bones Bailey was born in western Texas and raised in the town of Sherwood, a town within thirty minutes of San Angelo, Texas. Bones always took a liking to art and design, especially painting and making sculptures out of random objects that caught his eye. Bones attended the Irion County Texas Elementary and Middle Schools, where he played in the marching band and performed in concert band with the trombone. Bones was homeschooled for high school and later graduated with his diploma.

Bones especially liked "Ghoul- Metal" or rock which has an eerie sound. Bones enjoy crafting new clothing and creating future designs for stage wear, painting, sculpting, visiting grave sites, and creating music. Bones has a knack for creating anything artsy, especially MUSIC.

In his youth, Bones played rhythm guitar and keyboard for the band Kill This, which specialized in Ghoul-Rock. Bones also collaborated with the Ghost Town Outlaws and Cheap Beer & Cigarettes, both specializing in the same genre.

Bones found his true love, Jess, and they have been a power couple for over 20 years. That relationship led him to The Rock Road Rebels, and he toured and helped create the Horsepower album and win the 2013 Best Original Song Contest in St. Louis, Missouri with "Baby Girl".

15 years after leaving Rock Road Rebels Bones resurfaced in Sherwood, Texas. Hatch, founding member of The Ty Bounds Band, found Bones hiding the mesquite shrubs and working in the oil fields of West Texas. They were able to work out the foundation of the Ty Bounds Band, and they are once again creating music together. A gritty, rustic, and outlaw vibe that catches attention of all ages.
